LABOUR AND THE RELIEF INDUSTRY

Hobohemia and the Crucifixion Machine

Rival Images of a New World in 1930s Vancouver

Todd McCallum

9781926836287 (paper) • ebook available • $29.95

McCallum explores the connections between the history of transiency and that of Fordism, offering a new interpretation of the methods used by Vancouver's Relief Department when thousands of unemployed homeless transients formed "hobo jungles" in the city during the early years of the Great Depression.

This engaging, creative, and sometimes annoying work will force substantial re-thinking on the depression and on the theoretical frameworks used by historians. The theoretical interventions, powerful and insightful arguments, and deep empirical research will interest scholars of history, sociology, economics, business, literary criticism, and others.

« The Precarity Penalty: The Impact of Precarious Employment on Individuals, Households and Communities and What to Do About It »

by | par

Dr. Wayne Lewchuk (McMaster University)

Dr. Lewchuk is a founding member of the School of Labour Studies at McMaster University and the co-director of a five-year joint university community research program on Poverty and Employment Precarity in Southern Ontario (PEPSO). PEPSO, which released its first major report in 2013, is a joint initiative of the School of Labour Studies at McMaster University and United Way Toronto. A follow-up report, The Precarity Penalty, was released in May 2015 and received significant media coverage. This talk will address the main conclusions of the report as well as the proposals put forward to tackle precarity and its impacts on workers and communities.

Dr. Lewchuk holds a BA and MA in economics from the University of Toronto, and a Ph.D. in economics from the University of Cambridge.
